

FULL CIRCLE FARM RESTORATION AND TRAIL PLAN

CARNATION, WASHINGTON

STEWARDSHIP PARTNERS

Full Circle Farm, the largest community-supported agriculture operation in the Pacific Northwest, provides weekly boxes of organic vegetables for the urban areas of Seattle and Bellevue.

Located on a prominent meander of the Snoqualmie River, the productive farm fields are gradually shrinking as the river cuts into the forested banks. Jones & Jones, working with the non-profit environmental organization Stewardship Partners, prepared a management plan to address bank erosion, restore the river's riparian vegetation and interpret the natural and cultural history of the farm.

The Snoqualmie River valley, home to Full Circle Farm, has a complex relationship with the changing river. As the area develops, farmers in the valley must develop creative ideas in order to keep thriving.

FACTS

Largest Community-Supported Agriculture (CSA) operation in the Pacific Northwest
One of the first "Salmon-Safe" Farms in the state
River site has been inhabited by Snoqualmie Indians, dairy farmers and now a vegetable farm
A resident eagle nests in the tall alders above the river

BENEFITS

Public access to shoreline
Interpretive trail telling stories of area's history
Restoration of riparian landscape
Opportunities for connecting urban residents with farm life

JONES  JONES

ARCHITECTS
LANDSCAPE ARCHITECTS
PLANNERS